

FEICA PRESS RELEASE | On 29 September, the global adhesive and sealant community celebrates its contribution to a sustainable and circular society.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Brussels, 29 September 2025

International Adhesive & Sealant Day, celebrated each year on 29 September, gives everyone an ideal opportunity to highlight how our industry's products are crucial in a modern world and help create a more sustainable society.

Through the website www.internationaladhesiveandsealantday.com, you can learn how adhesives and sealants contribute to a sustainable society: renewable energy and smart grids, durable constructions, heritage preservation, medical care, and packaging recyclability, to name but a few.

Kristel Ons, FEICA Secretary General said, 'The adhesives and sealants industry is a shining example of collaboration across diverse value chains and markets, enabling a swift and effective response to both regulatory requirements and citizens' expectations for circular products. We hope everyone shares our enthusiasm in celebrating the International Adhesive & Sealant Day and putting our remarkable global industry in the spotlight. FEICA is also looking forward to seeing this spirit of collaboration continue at the next World Adhesive & Sealant Conference in 2026 in London'.

In Europe, in particular, the following are some examples of how our industry supports the European Commission's goals:

- Renewable energy and energy savings: windmills, solar panels, batteries, the insulation of buildings, and light-weight vehicles
- Good health and well-being: medical and dental care, and prostheses and masks
- Products relating to the EU strategic industries: electrolyzers to produce hydrogen, sustainable biogas and biomethane, for carbon capture and storage, and for power grids
- Clean water and sanitation: water membranes and filters
- Avoidance of food waste: reusable packaging
